

Flowers and their Meanings

Flowers have personalities, just like people. Some are cute, some are beautiful, some are lush, some only like groups and some like to stand alone. They are mystical, magical and very often miraculous. They speak of love, light and healing. They are messengers for us when we cannot find the proper words. They are deliverers for us in our absence when needed. It is sad that they die so shortly after we cut them, so it is important that they stay on in our hearts. They are treasures and are keepers of our memories. As well, flowers have a language all of their own. They stand tall, droop quietly, bend over to touch another, or are wildly colorful. Sometimes they even look like they are laughing. Regardless of their personalities, they touch our souls and the souls of those we gift them to. We get captivated by their beauty and their scents fill us with warmth and kindness. Flowers are also a powerful instrument of peace, tenderness and beauty in all types of ceremonies and celebrations. They become a wondrous blessing for all to behold.

To know more, there are many books and in-depth information concerning the meaning and life of flowers. This was a simple way to bring awareness of these tender and magnificent beings that dwell in nature.
