

Trees and Their Meanings

In this technological world, we more often than not, do not pay attention to trees. And yet they are so important to our lives, whether that be in a physical, emotional or spiritual way. Trees are our friends, our neighbors and very often our healers and oracles. We have much to learn from the tree, such as how to grow and stay strong under difficult circumstances, how to help each other, how to branch off, how to root well, and how to protect and persevere. They have been so generous to us. Not only do they have spiritual meanings but they have protected our fundamental needs, such as shelter, paper, fuel and furniture. However, as basic as that may seem, they are sacred and possess great knowledge, having witnessed the rise and fall of many nations and humanity itself.

In truth, human life is but a small fragment of a much larger picture, that patterns itself after the existence and life of the tree. They are our masters, our teachers, our protectors, our nurturers, our sustainers and our life-giving breathalysers. On average, one tree produces nearly 260 pounds of oxygen each year. Let us give gratitude, respect and honor to their magnificent contribution to this planet and those who dwell upon it. To know more, there are many books and in-depth information concerning the meaning and life of trees. This was a simple way to bring awareness of these beautiful and amazing nature-beings.
