

Onionhead Conflict Resolution Boards

violent

trusting

controlling

nurtured

rejected

honest

lonely

optimistic

disappointed

proud

impatient

grateful

ungrateful

powerful

Cowardly

accepted

Confused

humble

guilty

cherished

stubborn

peaceful

helpless

loved

grieving

understanding

cruel

willing

hopeless

fulfilled

arrogant

embracing

irresponsible

safe

pessimistic

responsible

angry

clear

ignorant

kind

frustrated

patient

humiliated

joyful

burdened

generous

abandoned

forgiving

jealous

loyal

doubting

guiltless

fearful

uplifted

selfish

Courageous

judging

allowing

resentful

excited

deceptive

hopeful

betrayed

wise

ambivalent

delighted

depressed

serene

abused

committed

ashamed

honored

Conflict Resolution Boards

Happiness is not the absence of problems but the wherewithal to deal with them knowledgeably, responsibly, caringly and effectively.

Name it - Claim it - Tame it - Aim it

No matter how old we are, our happiness and success are based on our ability to deal with problems in a compassionate and mindful way. When we realize that nothing has to go right in order for us to feel good, we are free to live a truly empowered and happy life. By appropriately identifying and expressing our feelings, we increase our ability to create an incredibly abundant life.

Name it

Think of a person or situation you are wrestling with. Pick one board from the Conflict Resolution Set. The three negative emotions are your real feelings in relationship to the situation. The three positive emotions are the solutions to the problem. Document them.

Claim it

Do not resist the negative emotion. Embrace it as a teaching moment to better understand yourself. There is no shame in having negative feelings, it is how we handle them that shames us. When we come to embrace all of our feelings, we then stop blaming others. Claim - no shame - no blame! Go to the Feeling Dictionary to have a better knowledge of these emotions.

Tame it

The more we understand and accept our own feelings, the calmer and stronger we begin to feel. We come to realize that our negative emotions can be our most masterful teachers. As example: more good foundations have been started because someone got angry enough to do something about an injustice.

Aim it

The positive feelings on the board lead us to the conflict resolution. They are the path to solving the problem. Using the three positive feelings, write out a plan of action for resolving the conflict. Consider this a binding contract with yourself. Go to the Feeling Dictionary to have a better knowledge of these emotions.

Get involved - get resolved - get the problem solved - become evolved. So simple.