

Warriorship Quotes

Don't go into battle, unless you are prepared to win it.

Don't go stand up for something, unless you are prepared to defend it.

Don't go talking about what is right, unless you are prepared to live it.

The true source of prosperity cannot be possessed but is meant to be embodied.

When we admit our own weaknesses, people are moved to be loyal to us.

The greatest power comes from an unselfish attitude.

One must keep their ego out of all circumstances.

Curb attitudes, such as resentment and hatred, as they weaken our character and resolve.

Simplicity is the wisest weapon for the warrior.

Pride creates a horrible ride.

Adhere to things that are derived from the divine cosmic order.

Pretension makes for problem extension.

Our purity ensures our best protection.

Admitting ignorance allows for continual learning.

Disengage from power struggles.

Withdraw from emotional competitiveness.

Always keep the common good in mind.

Mutual respect is crucial for the possibility of peace.

Indulgent behavior precludes safety and security.

Arrogance invites danger and trouble.

Flexibility, when appropriate, creates great strength.

Mere cleverness does not instigate benefits for all.

No relationship can be sustained properly if there is any rivalry.

Virtue keeps one free from wrongdoing and impediments.

Disengage from all dramas.

Withdraw immediately from inferior influences.

Constantly nourish a sincere, contemplative mind.

When taking a risk, first build up defenses concerning consequences.

Utilize resources properly and responsibly.

Procure knowledge, as it ultimately will be a lifetime benefit.

Stay heartfelt and humble after achieving success.

Great warriorship is the combination of mental, emotional and spiritual self-integration.